

CAN CROKER SWAY VOTE IS PROBLEM

Effect of Cablegram on Tammany a Burning Question.

HEARST BACK IN CITY

Activity Will Now Be Confined to Greater New York.

Democratic Leaders Profess Not to Be Alarmed at Conditions in Organization—The Enthusiasm Which Greeted Editor Taken as Favorable Sign—Jettling Remains at Old Odds, with Little Hearst Money in Sight.

New York, Nov. 1.—No incident in the present campaign has created so big a stir locally as the cable which Richard Croker sent to Senator Patrick H. McCarran, the leader of the Kings County Democracy, congratulating him on the stand he took in repudiating Hearst.

As will be remembered, Senator McCarran, whose organization is only second in strength and power to Tammany Hall, stood out to the last at the Buffalo convention against the nomination of Hearst. To all arguments advanced in favor of the candidacy of the editor, McCarran turned a deaf ear, and his delegates worked and voted to be last for Representative Sulzer.

On the other hand, Murphy, as the leader of Tammany Hall, yielded early to the overtures of the Hearst managers, and it was due to Murphy and the delegates he controlled through the unit vote of voting that Hearst was selected as the nominee.

McCarren Out in Open.

McCarren was as strongly opposed to Hearst as ever after the nomination was made, but said nothing about the course he would pursue until Mr. Hearst defied him by putting up an independent ticket in Brooklyn. McCarren then called a meeting of the county committee of his organization and, as became the part of a party leader desiring to keep "regular," he had introduced a resolution endorsing the entire State ticket from Hearst down to the candidate for engineer and surveyor.

But in speaking on the resolution he took occasion to let the world know what he thought of Hearst. He declared him to be a traitor to the Democratic party, and declared he could not be elected poundmaster in his native State of California, where he is best known.

This was the signal to the organization men of Brooklyn to know that the Democratic ticket, and that alone was enough to bring about a big defection in the Democratic ranks from Hearst.

Murphy Loyal to Hearst.

Murphy, however, after the matter of local nominations was settled to his satisfaction, was loyal to Hearst. His preparations were being made to give him the full vote of the organization. Those leaders who had hung back, fearing the Independent League, was set on supplanting Tammany Hall in New York and the regular Democracy in the rest of the State were induced to get into line, and for several days there was not a cloud in the political horizon as far as Tammany was concerned.

Then came the message from Croker, endorsing the stand that McCarren had taken repudiating Hearst. It is a remarkable situation, and the position of a man who has expatriated himself still carries weight with a political organization, but the voice of Croker, now living 3,000 miles across the water, is still potent in Tammany Hall.

His Influence seems now to be almost as strong as when he was the actual leader of the organization. This is not said with any bias to candidacy of Mr. Hearst, or of any other candidate, but simply to show how strongly Croker impressed himself on probably the strongest and best trained political organization in the world.

Murphy's Friends Show Resentment.

That Croker's message to McCarren has created consternation in the present management of Tammany Hall there can be little doubt. The friends of Mr. Hearst, however, show that they are not from the other side, there was nothing left for him to do but admit that Croker had sent the cable.

"It is entirely contrary to the teachings and attitude of Mr. Croker," said the Tammany leader, "and I am not a crook. I suppose that I do not like Mr. Hearst any better than he likes me, but he is the nominee of the Democratic party, and I am going to support him."

Hearst Men Not Worried.

Max F. Ihmsen and the other Hearst managers do not seem to be disturbed in the slightest degree by the message of Mr. Croker. Ihmsen said today that he did not believe that Mr. Croker's attitude would cut any figure at all in the campaign.

Mr. Hearst is back from his up-State tour, greatly satisfied with the results of his trip. Those who accompanied him say, officially, greetings received along the way, especially in manufacturing towns, are not to be sneezed at, and the crowds he drew were on an average twice as large and four times as enthusiastic as those which are listening to Hughes.

It was especially, they say, in such large cities as Syracuse, Rochester, and Buffalo, where there are many factories, and where the voting population is made up largely of working men.

From start to finish Mr. Hearst has had to fight his way through dense and enthusiastic crowds of men who wanted even to touch his coat if they could not shake his hand. This scene was repeated time and again in every big manufacturing city up-State. In Rochester the police were powerless to protect him from the rush. They were swept aside like straws in a gale when the voters made their rush to get near the candidate.

Hearst Still Confident.

Mr. Hearst got back from his trip this morning, still confident that he would win the fight. Although he is more or less exhausted by the tremendous strain of the campaign, and although his voice is almost worn to a thread by his constant speaking indoors and out, he is still game. He spoke at Carnegie Hall shortly after midnight this morning to a crowd of over 4,000 people, who filled all the chairs and most of the standing room in the great auditorium.

This was probably the first time in the history of Carnegie Hall that so large an audience sat so late to hear a political speech. Mr. Hearst had been booked to make sixteen speeches last night, following his return from his up-State tour. He was physically unfit to keep all the engagements that had been prepared for him, but he made several speeches in the East Side and the Bronx. Owing to his great physical exhaustion and soreness of his throat, Mr. Hearst sent word to Carnegie Hall that he would be unable to speak there. He drove to his home at Lexington avenue and Twenty-eighth street. Then he learned that the great audience was hanging on, and was listening to rambling speeches by third-rate orators in expectation of his arrival.

Mr. Hearst ordered an automobile and rode to Carnegie Hall forthwith. He arrived there at 12:35. His face was drawn with fatigue, due to his twelve speeches Wednesday in the western part of the State.

The crowd cheered him for over ten minutes—its four hours of waiting having increased rather than lessened the enthusiasm. Mr. Hearst had difficulty in starting his speech, and during the fifteen minutes he addressed the crowd he was repeatedly applauded. His voice was hoarse and broken, but still could be heard well throughout the audience. At the end of his speech he received a prolonged ovation.

Mr. Hughes is still sticking to the people up-State, but there will be a grand wind-up of his campaign in this city, when he will make many speeches to the voters of Greater New York. There were over a hundred mass meetings in this city today, and the managers at State headquarters from Mr. Woodruff down to clerk seem absolutely confident the Hughes ticket will win. They bank considerably on slight defections from Hearst in the labor organizations both here and up-State.

After a conference of the Republican Congressional Committee, of which Republican Sherman, New York, is chairman, here today, a forecast was given out claiming a majority for the Republicans in the next House of fifty-eight. The forecast predicts the election of 22 Republicans and 164 Democrats. The Republican majority in the present House is 111.

Appeal to Intellect.

Congressman Loudenslager, of New Jersey, who is the secretary of the committee, said this afternoon:

"We have appealed to the best intellect of the people, and have not dealt in vagaries or theories. We have put before them our record as their servants, and asked them to render their verdict, and we are willing to permit them to speak on November 6, confident that by a large majority they will record their approval of the record made."

After early bets on the Broad Street curb at odds of 3 to 1 on Hughes as against Hearst for the governorship—about $10,000 being placed in this way—the ratio shifted back this afternoon to 2-1-2 on Hughes at $25,000, and $25,000 were placed at the latter odds. There was a bet of $3,000 even that Hughes would be elected by 8,000 plurality.

Early in the afternoon, fully $25,000 was offered on Hughes at 2-1, but not much Hearst money was in sight at these figures. His holders wanted 1 to 2.

League Candidate Is Dead.

Thomas S. Delaney, the Independence League candidate for Congress in the Second district of Brooklyn, died today of a complication of diseases at his home in Williamsburg. He was born in New York fifty-five years ago and for more than twenty-five years he was actively identified with labor interests. In 1891 he was a Democratic candidate for assembly in Williamsburg, but was defeated by a small majority.

Two years later he ran for Congress on the Democratic ticket, and was again defeated. When he was recently nominated for Congress on the Independence League ticket he was not in good health, and was warned against an active campaign. Three weeks ago he was taken seriously ill, and he never rallied. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

COUNTY TO PAY OFF DEBT.

Anne Arundel Will Use Money to Make Improvements.

Special to The Washington Herald. Annapolis, Md., Nov. 1.—Although the recent sale of the $250,000 worth of bonds by the commissioners of Anne Arundel County has not as yet been ratified, the closing of the deal is expected at any time.

The issue is to pay off all floating debt of the county, rebuild bridges, and to meet current expenses, but no provision is made for the county roads except in the current levy. There are now under construction three iron and concrete bridges. The iron and concrete have been found to withstand the ravages of the teredo worm, which in the brackish waters of the county destroys the usefulness of wooden bridges in about twelve years.

OPPOSE THE TWO-CENT RATE.

Railroad Attorneys Give Their Views to Virginia Commission.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 1.—Attorneys representing the Chesapeake and Ohio, Norfolk and Western, Chesapeake Western, Norfolk and Southern, Seaboard Air Line, and Southern Railway companies appeared before the Virginia State corporation commission today, and filed answers opposing the 2-cent rate submitted by the commission July 31, 1906, and presenting reasons why it should not be enforced. The roads attempted to show that they did not and could not afford any reduction in their rates, and that even if they did, the commission has no authority to impose any new or modified rates.

FIND WRIGHT GUILTY

Negro Who Attacked Mr. and Mrs. Gooding Must Hang.

JURY OUT BUT 45 MINUTES

Accused Took Stand in Own Behalf and Tried to Prove Alibi—Stay of Execution Granted to Enable Appeal to Higher Courts—Judge Says He Had Fair Trial—Other News.

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, (Bell Telephone, 115.)
Corner Prince and Royal streets.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 1.—"Guilty as indicted" was the verdict returned exactly at 12 o'clock to-night by the jury in the Alexandria County Circuit Court in the case of Joseph Thomas, colored, alias John Wright, charged with attack upon Miss Mabel Risley, now Mrs. Forrest Gooding, near Luna Park, on the evening of September 9.

The punishment was fixed at death. The verdict was announced after the jury had deliberated for forty-five minutes.

Prisoner Unmoved.

At the time the jurors filed in from their consultation apartment, the court room contained a large gathering of interested citizens. The negro seemed to realize the import of the occasion, maintaining the stolid cast of countenance which has characterized his appearance throughout the trial.

John B. Henderson, Jr., the foreman of the jury, announced, in reply to the usual question put by the clerk, that a verdict had been reached. It was then read, but the penalty not having been provided, Judge Nicol directed that the jury again retire in order to comply with the provisions of the law in that respect. After ten minutes the twelve men returned with the verdict containing the death penalty.

Attorney James E. Clements for the defense moved the court to set aside the verdict and grant a new trial. This Judge Nicol denied, saying that he was going to dispose of the case at once, whereupon Mr. Clements noted an exception.

Says Accused Had Fair Trial.

The prisoner was then arraigned, replying in answer to the clerk's question that he had nothing to say. Judge Nicol thereupon sentenced him to be hanged December 14, 1906, between the hours of 6 a. m. and 12 noon.

The court granted a stay of execution for forty days in which to allow counsel for the defense to prepare a bill of exceptions for an appeal to the State Supreme Court. Judge Nicol stated that the prisoner had received a fair trial before an intelligent jury as could be found in Virginia. The case, he said, had received careful, thorough, and conscientious consideration.

The defendant was placed on the stand in his own behalf. His testimony in the main was a denial of the charge in full. He asserted that he was nowhere in the vicinity of the scene of the alleged crime the night of September 9, but was out driving that evening.

Fined for Gambling.

Chief Goods was the principal witness in the Police Court this morning at a hearing in which eight young men were defendants on the charge of gambling. The chief took the crowd into custody last night in a second-story apartment of a building on the northeast corner of King and Pitt streets. They gave their names as John Simmons, John Henderson, James Fox, A. Kinchloe, Milton Self, Harry Deagan, P. Lawler, and Frank Mason. Excepting Mason and Henderson, who were dismissed, each was fined $5.

Mr. J. T. Preston, secretary of the recently organized Alexandria chamber of commerce, today formally opened the headquarters of the chamber in the second story of the building at the southeast corner of King and Washington streets. These apartments were formerly occupied by the Business Men's League.

The funeral of William C. Wolf, who died last Monday, took place this afternoon at 4 o'clock from his late residence, 124 King street. Rev. J. A. Jeffers, of Trinity M. E. Church, conducted the services, and the remains were placed in the Henderson vault.

Railway Increases Force.

The Southern Railway Company today increased by ten its force of special officers employed in and about the yards, roundhouse, and machine shops of the company here. At the request of local representatives of the road, Judge Bailey, of the Corporation Court, appointed the additional men. Owing to the strike, the company has as yet been unable to have several new engines in the yard here made ready for service.

In the Corporation Court Judge Bailey heard the argument in the case of David M. Newbold against the Capital City Telephone Company. Attorneys Norton & Boothe and Robinson Moncreux appeared for the plaintiff. Attorneys Cawley and Janney for the trustees, and Attorney John M. Johnson for the telephone company. The court took the matter under advisement.

A Mrs. Dove, whose home is near Franconia, Fairfax county, while in this city today stated that she had been held up at the point of a gun by a colored man at her house yesterday. The negro, she said, stole several articles, in addition to some money, from the house. His general appearance today, she responded to the description of Frank Robinson, who is wanted in this city for complicity in the murder of Charles T. Smith.

DEATH OF COL. R. H. DULANY

Noted Confederate Officer and Large Land Owned Passes Away.

Wounded at Battle of Gettysburg, His Right Arm Was Paralyzed. Survived by Three Children.

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 1.—Col. Richard Hunter Dulany, of Welbourne Hall, Loudoun county, Virginia, a distinguished Confederate soldier, and one of the largest land owners in Virginia, who died suddenly of apoplexy, will be buried Friday.

Col. Dulany was one of the best known and popular men in his State, and had hosts of friends in Baltimore, where he often visited. He was eighty-six years old. His father was the late John Peyton Dulany, a descendant of the famous Dulany family of Maryland, who removed to Virginia about 100 years ago. His mother was Miss Mary Ann de Butts, of England, a daughter of Dr. Samuel de Butts and Mary Welby, niece of Sir William Welby, of Grantham, Lincolnshire, England.

Col. Dulany married his cousin, Rebecca Dulany, daughter of Major Rozier Dulany of the United States Army, by whom he had four children—H. Grafton Dulany, who died several years ago; Mary Dulany, who married Mr. Robert Neville, and who lives near her father's home, in Virginia; Fannie Dulany, who married J. Southgate Lemmon, of Baltimore, and Richard H. Dulany, who married Eva Randolph, and who lives at Grafton Hall, near the estate of his father. These three children, a number of grandchildren, and one great-grandchild, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel H. Morrison, of New York, formerly of Baltimore, survive him. Mrs. Morrison is a daughter of Mrs. Lemmon.

At the outbreak of the civil war Col. Dulany entered the service of the Confederacy, enlisting in the Sixth Virginia Cavalry. Later he was placed in command of the Seventh Cavalry, and served with distinction under Wade Hampton. His absolute fearlessness, which was one of his leading characteristics, and his skill in handling his men, soon gained for him a reputation as a commander, which made him famous in the army of Northern Virginia.

At the battle of Gettysburg he was severely wounded, and it was necessary to remove the bone of his right arm, from the shoulder to the elbow, practically paralyzing the member. Despite this tremendous handicap, however, he rode and drove as of old, and when handling the ribbons of his four-in-hand frequently amazed his companions by his dexterity in using his leg in lieu of his disabled arm, throwing it over the rein he wished to pull. He was a man of exceedingly temperate habits, and retained his faculties unimpaired to the end.

Minnich had chased a rabbit into a rock pile, and had been engaged in digging a hole under the mass. His double-barrel shot-gun was lying at his feet with the barrel toward him, and as he reached to pull the weapon toward him, one lead was discharged. The shot entered his right side and ranged around the back.

The boy lived about fifteen minutes and died in his mother's arms, bleeding to death before a physician could reach the scene. He exonerated his companions. The coroner, Dr. T. C. Firsirot, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.
